A MESSAGE FROM COUNCILMEMBER OLIVERIO

Dear District 6 Neighbors,

I hope you are enjoying your summer and have been able to patronize the many community events that District 6 has to offer this time of year.

I am honored to serve as your newly elected councilmember. Since taking office on March 20th I have been very busy. Upon my arrival, I immediately joined with Citizens Against Airport Pollution (CAAP) and worked to ensure that the airport curfew stayed in place, in addition I have held various traffic calming meetings and worked with the Parks Department to improve maintenance at our local parks.

Also, I have attended many wonderful community gatherings including neighborhood association meetings, the Willow Glen and Alameda Farmers Markets, children's theater productions, fire station tours, lunches with seniors, the West San Carlos Jamboree and joined the San Jose Unified School District to distribute dictionaries at our local public schools, among other community events.

I have attended every council meeting since taking office. Council meetings are available for you to watch on TV. Tune into channel 26 at 1:30 PM every Tuesday and 7:00 PM every other Tuesday for live broadcasts. Recorded meetings can be viewed on Thursdays at 7:00 PM and Saturdays at 10:00 AM.

Over the past few months I have voted to support the airport curfew, voted against raising your garbage fees, supported Mayor Reed's 2007-2008 budget, and voted against moving forward with planning and developing of the Coyote Valley.

I hope you find my first newsletter informative, and I look forward to seeing you at the Willow Glen Founders Day & Italian Family Festa in September!

Enjoy the rest of your Summer!

Sincerely,

Pierluigi Oliverio

A speeder who made a turn on Glen Eyrie from Willow hit and knocked down the 25mph traffic calming sign. The sign has since been replaced.

Higher fines and more enforcement would reduce speeding

By Pierluigi Oliverio
published in the Mercury News 7/31
(mercurynews.com/search/ci_6505656)

What happened last week in the Almaden Valley was a tragedy. Two teenage boys at the beginning of their lives and a married couple holding hands on their nightly stroll - all dead, just like that.

My first reaction, sadness, soon turned to outrage. What is going on when a couple walking along their neighborhood street are wiped out by a speeding car? It's time to do something about a problem that is plaguing our communities. Make the punishment fit the crime of speeding. Some drivers may think this is trivial, but we know speeding can be deadly.

This is not about "other" people. I've caught myself going over the speed limit on neighborhood streets. Admit it, you have, too. We are the lucky ones; our speeding has not caused a serious accident. At least, not yet.

Every day my office at San Jose City Hall receives calls about speeding through neighborhoods, and every day we call the city's Department of Transportation to see what we can do. We're told that state law limits cities' ability to lower speed limits or increase fines. In addition, we are told that because of San Jose's budget shortfall, there is little money to provide traffic calming measures. Although I understand these reasons, I can't accept them without trying to work within the system to make improvements. I believe that San Jose can and needs to do better.

I propose the following:

1.) Increase the fine for speeding on a neighborhood street. Let's work to change state law to allow cities to raise the fine. Let's work with our local members of the state Senate and Assembly to sponsor a bill to achieve this objective. Many of us will not park in a handicap spot or use the carpool lane unlawfully because of the high fine that is attached. If you started to hear that co-workers or neighbors had received

$500 fines for speeding on a neighborhood street, it would make you pay attention. Over time, it would change the behavior of drivers.

2.) Hire traffic officers. These officers would only give tickets to those who violated traffic laws, including speeding and running stop signs or lights. The traffic officers would not respond to any other calls. I believe that they would not only pay their own salaries from the fines, but they would create revenue for the city. For example, the money that is generated from the fines could be used to hire more traffic officers and for traffic calming purposes such as to pay for speed humps, stop signs, and "roundabouts" (a large circle that is placed within the middle of an intersection so that cars need to go slowly around the circle; many historic neighborhoods have roundabouts).

3.) Establish a San Jose Traffic Calming Commission. The city had a traffic calming committee that met from February 2001 to June 2001 to evaluate policies, criteria and tracking systems of existing traffic calming programs, and make or recommend changes as necessary. I am not one to want more bureaucracy; however, I think that establishing a traffic calming commission in San Jose would be beneficial. The commission would include council members and residents of San Jose and would be charged with similar duties as was the traffic calming committee in addition to researching how other cities handle speeding issues.

I did not know the married couple or the teenage boys who died in Almaden last week. I do know that this incident should serve as a wake-up call to all of us. Drivers need to take responsibility and obey the speed limit. When they don't, there should be a high price to pay.

Rose Garden Park

In April of 2007 Councilmember Oliverio proposed the idea of outsourcing park maintenance for Rose Garden Park as a pilot program for one year. This program would have allowed the city-wide historic Rose Garden Park; home to weddings, graduations among other memorable events, to be maintained by a private contractor through an open bidding process.

The City of San Jose has an open bidding process that it uses for street paving maintenance among other projects. The bidding process includes living wage policies and has been used by the city for many years.

This picture illustrates the lack of attention the Rose Garden park received this past year. Vibrant rose bushes were once home to this rose bed. The maintenance has improved since this picture was taken (4/25/2007).

Councilmember Oliverio's outsourcing proposal came before the city council in April. Mayor Reed and Councilmember Oliverio supported the proposal however other council members wanted this issue to go before the public/private partnership committee for discussion before moving forward.

When the discussion of the possibility of outsourcing park maintenance was discussed, the condition of the Rose Garden Park improved.

(Councilmember Oliverio's Rose Garden Park memo is available on the District 6 website).

San Jose Businesses Making a Difference: Edison Pharmaceuticals

Councilmember Oliverio continues to share the importance of job growth in San Jose. Below is a short summary of a success story about a small business that started in San Jose and that has stayed in San Jose.

Dr. Guy Miller is Chairman and CEO of Edison Pharmaceuticals located at the San Jose BioCenter in Edenvale, South San Jose.

Edison Pharma is a privately held biotechnology company, based in Silicon Valley at the San Jose BioCenter, is focused on drugs targeting the mitochondria- the cell's energy center. The Company's initial focus is on rare inherited diseases of the mitochondrial and leveraging insights derived therein, to pursue other non-rare diseases that share common mechanisms. Dr. Guy Miller founded Edison Pharmaceuticals in 2005. Dr. Miller and his team are working to develop its first drug, EPI-A0001 targeting Friedreich's Ataxia. Friedreich's Ataxia is a rare, or orphan disease, which affects less than 20,000 individuals worldwide.

Orphan mitochondrial diseases are neither treatable nor curable...yet. The common element of these diseases is that they short-circuit a cell's ability to make sufficient energy. Children and young adults with these conditions under accelerated aging, resulting in diseases more commonly found in the elderly such as heart attack, stroke, blindness. Over time, the disorders cause death.

Edison was started when Dr. Miller was approached by the Friedreich's Ataxia Research Alliance, and concerned parents of children with these diseases. In 2005, he started Edison, which was incubated at Bay City Capital in San Francisco. When it came time to identify a headquarters for laboratory operations, Edison's director of administration, Ms. Tammy Larson, contacted the San Jose Redevelopment Agency inquiring about San Jose's bioincubator which fosters a productive environment for medical companies.

After a tour of the facility, and meetings with Ms. Ru Weerakoon, (former Deputy Director with the Redevelopment Agency, who is now the Economic Development Director for Mayor Reed) and John Weiss (Assistant Director) with the Redevelopment Agency, Edison took up residence at the San Jose BioCenter.

"One of the main reasons I chose San Jose was the thoughtful care and professionalism displayed by Ru and John," stated Dr. Miller. "We saw a unique opportunity to grow Edison in San Jose with the flexibility and support we required."

Eighteen months ago Dr. Miller had one assistant and $250K to start Edison. Now, Edison employs 15 people and has just closed a Series B Stock Offering and a major pharma partnership. Edison continues to forge relationships with many non-profit groups like Friedreich's Ataxia Research Alliance, Seek a Miracle and Muscular Dystrophy Associations. In addition, last year Edison partnered with Los Angeles based CHDI Inc., a non-profit organizations that assists with efforts in Huntington's diseases.

In closing, Dr. Miller shared the following three points with residents.

1). Fiscal health. In a City like San Jose, the tenth largest city in the United States, fiscal health is essential. Without that, the best of plans will not succeed. San Jose needs to have sustainable fiscal policies to provide for the needs of its residents. When biotechnology companies like Edison locate at the BioCenter, they generate jobs and are a part of expanding the supporting infrastructure. These contribute to the financial health of the city.

2). Social Responsibility. San Jose should take pride that Edison Pharma is devoted to helping children in need live longer, productive happy lives. Helping those less fortunate is part of the fabric of our culture and can be integrated into a for-profit enterprise.

3). Investment. Edison's investment in San Jose and San Jose's investment in Edison sets a positive example for other pharma companies who are thinking about coming to San Jose. Productive relationships open doors and will draw other companies to San Jose. The next steps will be establishing a critical mass of biotechnology companies to enable efficiencies.

As the 10th largest city in America, it is essential that San Jose keep and attract business to San Jose. The medial industry is the fastest growing field. San Jose worked hard to attract Edison, now it will need to continue to attract more business like this.
